

I will be here for you like a coach, guiding you through every step of the process. It does not make a difference to me if I show you two or 200 houses - either way, all I want is for you to find the best fit for your lifestyle.

Wherever you are in your journey, this is about far more than a transaction. You need someone there to support and protect your interests.

With years of experience and a strong network in the industry, I am happy to answer all your questions or just talk things through. It is important to me that you get the best results possible, which is why I will give you my honest feedback, ensuring you know exactly what you're getting into.

Real estate is a tool that you can use however you like, even to build wealth. With my experience in residential, investment and Airbnb style vacation properties I am confident I can help you get where you want to be. Once the transaction is over, I will continue to support you and your family as your lifelong Realtor!

BECAUSE HOME MATTERS.

I believe you should know the person behind the business card. So here's my story!

During one of the most overwhelming times, I took a moment to pause. Through extensive planning and hard work, my family and I achieved a lifelong dream by drawing on a lesson I learned years earlier as a high school football coach.

As my son ran over to ask me a question, I stopped in the middle of writing an email. Stress filled every inch of me, and when my wife came to the door with our daughter trailing behind her, we shared a knowing look. It was time we figured out a way to do things differently.

When the pandemic hit in 2020, it threw my wife, Christie, and me for a loop. I had already been working from home as a Realtor for years while we were raising our two babies. My wife also had a day job in an office working long hours. It was tricky, especially when our daughter was born 15 months after our son. Before when it was just my son and me, I took him everywhere I could - showings, the office and more. We were fortunate to have support from our family, and so thankful for the help we did receive. However, for the most part, it was just the three of us all day every day. When we found out our daughter was on the way, Christie and I set a goal for her to leave her job and stay home with our children, but we knew we were years away from reaching that reality.

With two under two, life got busy fast. When COVID hit, all four of us were home, and it quickly became unsustainable. With our heavy workloads, it was tough to maintain a steady balance.

Neither one of us could be the best versions of ourselves at work or as parents. We talked it over, prayed about it and came up with a plan. Within three months we reached our goal, and she became a stay-at-home mother and now helps our own business with the marketing side of things. We have the work/life balance we dreamed of.

With her support and some redistributing of tasks, I was able to double my business that first year. Through our consistent execution, we were able to accomplish in three months what we thought would take years.

Before I became a Realtor, I was a high school football coach and teacher. Through coaching, I developed a strong determination to be resilient and consistently choose a positive attitude. A life changing lesson I learned as a coach is that people express their desire to quit right before making a breakthrough. Rather than give up when things get hard, I identify the problem and how to fix it. I feel confident knowing God is in control and that my current circumstances do not determine my outcome. I can choose how I respond in each scenerio.

It wasn't easy to achieve our big goal years ahead of schedule, but we stuck with it. I'm so proud of my family and the direction we are headed.

I became a full-time Realtor to support the life I wanted for my family and did whatever I needed to make it work.

When I'm not working, I enjoy reading, exercising, grilling outside, coaching youth flag football, and going on adventures with my family. My favorite part about being a Realtor is solving problems and seeing my clients' hard work come to fruition as we reach their real estate goals.
